

New Two-year (Accelerated) LLB Programme

One of the University in UK is pleased to announce that the School of Law is currently accepting applications for the 2-year (Accelerated) LLB Programme, which allows students to complete their undergraduate law studies and secure a Qualifying Law Degree in two years instead of the normal three years.

Now based on the modern de Havilland Campus, supported by a £10m facility in the state-of-the-art Law Court Building, the School has introduced into its curriculum a 2-year LLB Programme to compliment the traditional three year LLB Programmes, which are available (LLB Law, LLB Commercial Law and LLB Government and Politics).

Students who join the 2-year programme this September will study during Semesters A, B and C and will be able to graduate in 2013. This means that students will be able to save on living costs during their studies and enter employment more quickly than their peers – indeed recent statistics show that 94% of 2010 law graduates of this University are now in graduate-level employment or further study.

If a student chooses, they will also be able to obtain a named Qualifying Law Degree in either Commercial Law or Government and Politics.
